As the fascination with the country's cuisine has taken off, chowhounds are flocking to the ancient ochre-hued city.

"Moroccan cuisine is very hot in America these days," said Ms. Paula Wolfert, whose pioneering 1973 cookbook, Couscous and Other Good Food From Morocco," won last year's Cookbook Hall of Fame Award from the James Beard Foundation. "It's an exciting time to eat in Marrakesh.

As the fascination with Moroccan cuisine has taken off - both in the United States and around the globe - epicures and chowhounds are flocking to the ancient ochre-hued city of Marrakesh.
